"No one to love? none to caress! Traveling alone through life's wilder-

The author of this song lives here in Washington, and he boards at a hotel within a square or so of the White House. He is now a man of perhaps forty, and he wrote the song many years ago. He was in love with a beautiful girl and the day was fixed for their marriage. In the intrval between the engagement and this day, the war broke out and the young man entisted. He was out on the field when the time approached for his wedding. It was on the eye of a great battle in which the young man was to take part. He wrote to his sweetheart asking her to postpone the day of the mar range until after the fight. This she refused to do, and said if he did not return and keep his part of the agreement she would consider the rengagement off. The young man preferred to trust to luck in regard to the engagement to being considered a coward in running away from his first battle, and remained on the field. His lady love, however, was so piqued at the refusal that she persisted in her rejection of his suit and married another man. Inspired with the feeling of the desertion, the rejected wrote the song which has had such a wide run. He not only wrote the song but he re-mained true to his first love, and for some time, the story goes, he has been living here with his moth er. Not long ago, however, his love's husband died, and since that time he has renewed the acquaintance of the widow, who, though older than when he went to war, is still charming. The old flame has, it is said, revived in the fair widow's of a match.

Improvement of Live Stock.

To those who make farming a business-farming in its best sense -the subject of the greatest interest is live stock, for without live stock there can be no permanent success in agriculture. Mixed hus-bandry is the best of all husband ry; and mixed husbandry without farm animals would be an absurdi ty, something that only a lunatic would persist in. Generally all this is readily allowed; it is seldom however, that it is properly and in the right spirit acted upon. In this inaction is implied incapacity, which is the most melancholy feature of the situation. The chief hope of the future, as to all this, is the fact that there is a growing belief that the highest order of mind and business ability can find ample scope for the exercise of its greatest powers in the study of agriculture. In all the more highly civilized countries of Europe can be seen the practical demonstration of these ideas, and the necessities of competition will force the Ameri nees or to throw up the sponge .-Machinery is doing all the drudgery of the farm, consequently more time can be given to the farm stock. The first step toward this end is to analyze only, thoroughly and males employ only thoroughbred males. It is not enough that the male be a No. 21 N. Charles St., good-looking grade. A grade may look just as well as the very best of the kind, but it has been demonstrated that his excellencies are not transmittable, while the qualities of the thoroughbred are fixed and hardly ever fail to be transmitted. It is not infrequent that grades are disposed of to the unwary for thoroughbreds, hence great care should be used in buying and none but reliable dealers be trusted, for, if the start is wrong, time and money are thrown away .- Journal of Agriculture.

The Birth of Fashion.

Mme, de Pompadour once had following week with pieces of plaster on their faces. A fashion was established, and it was kept up for a long time. The same lady, as I suppose you know, was exceedingly diminutive in stature. To rem edy this defect she invented the high-heeled boots. They were un known before her time. Result: the ladies of the court took to high heeled boots, and another fashion Board by day, week or month on had its birth.

quantity of hair. She didn't know what to do with it. She was wait ing for a barber one day with the intention of being shorn, and had piled up her hair in a careless manner, when she suddenly found that this style of head dress set off her small features to advantage. Result: monstrously high coiffure came into fashion, and were worn for a very long time. Anne of Australia had exquisitely formed arms. Result: short sleeves came

Would you believe it? Some time ago a large number of ladies had one heel of their shoes made lower than the other. Result: the "Alexandria limp became the height of fash-ion." The "Greeing bord" another result of this unfortunate defect.
